

Celeb-approved Gifts to Add to Your Shopping List

By Amy Moczynski ★★
on Wednesday, November 28, 2012

Post a Comment

Like 0

Tweet 0

+1 0

Pinterest 0

Share

Print

It's time to start shopping for your loved ones this holiday season, and you might be looking for some recommendations for what to get the special people in your life. Who better to give recommendations than a celebrity or public figure? If someone is willing to put their name on a product, you know it has to be good. Looking for some celebrity endorsed or created gift ideas to include on your holiday shopping list? Here are some gift ideas that are sure to win rave reviews.

For the foodies

There seems to be no shortage of celebrities who are willing to share their recipes with the world. Valerie Bertinelli, Stanley Tucci, Gwyneth Paltrow, and even Maya Angelou all have cookbooks for sale for all those culinary creative types out there. There are also cookbooks inspired by some of your favorite television shows. Game of Thrones, Star Trek, and Downton Abbey all have cookbooks that are inspired by the television series. But what good is a book of recipes without some fabulous supplies to prepare your meals? HSN offers Wolfgang Puck cookware that is sure to help you serve up your next delicious dish.

For those with special needs or who want to make a difference

If someone on your shopping list has a medical condition that requires them to wear a medical ID bracelet, now they no longer have to be confined to wearing only the traditional silver ID bracelets. Medical ID Marketplace recently unveiled eight different styles of medical ID bracelets that have been designed by celebrities, including Misty Mae-Treanor, Meatloaf, Kimora Lee Simmons, Melissa Joan Hart, and Leeza Gibbons. These celebrity designed medical ID bracelets were each designed to bring attention to a particular medical condition, and proceeds from the sales of the bracelets will benefit eight different organizations, including the American Cancer Society, St. Jude Children's Hospital, and more.

For the pet lovers

For certain pet owners, only the best will do. If you or a loved one are only interested in supplying a pooch with celebrity endorsed products, consider switching them to a pet food endorsed by your favorite celebrity. Rachael Ray has her line of dog food and treats called Nutrish; Ellen DeGeneres partnered with Halo pet foods; and even the dog whisperer himself Cesar Millan has created his own line of dog food.

If you're looking to buy an ensemble for one of your favorite four-legged creatures, Martha Stewart has a line of outfits and accessories for pets available at Petsmart. Whether you want to buy your dog a new sweater, toy, or blanket, Martha's line can add a touch of elegance to your pet's wardrobe. If your pet is into rocking out rather than simple elegance, Bret Michaels also has his own line of pet outfits and accessories available at Petsmart.